Diversity 2006, National Conference on Workforce Diversity Starts Today & Continues through Wednesday 40+ Keynotes & Presenters to Speak -- Registration Available at the Door

Rochester, NY -- May 22, 2006 – The Diversity 2006 Conference, one of the nation's leading educational events on workforce diversity, starts today at 8 a.m. the Rochester Riverside Convention Center and continues through Wednesday May 24.

This is the sixth major conference presented by the Workforce Diversity Network, a non-profit organization that is a leading resource for education and networking on workforce diversity.

More than 40 of the nation's most highly-regarded experts on workforce diversity will speak including Cathy Bao Bean, Darryl K. Henderson, Art Jackson, Laraine Kaminsky, Steve Robbins, and 2006 World Lawyer of the Year Taswell Papier of South Africa.

Those not registered can register at the door today, Tuesday or Wednesday. Fees range from $300 to 840 for the full conference. For a detailed schedule visit www.workforcediversitynetwork.com or call 585-224-2727.

Sessions will span the most current diversity issues such as generational, global and cultural changes. They will be presented in a mix of learning styles and interactivity to maximize the learning experience and allow attendees to share ideas, build relationships, and work with expert practitioners and peers who are dealing with similar challenges and responsibilities.

Diversity 2006 concludes with a half-day symposium for people in the legal profession entitled – Diversity the New Imperative - How In-house Counsel and Law Firms Can Meet the Challenge.

The Workforce Diversity Network is the nation's leading resource for education and networking on workforce diversity. Since 1996 the not-for-profit organization has presented some of the nation's most extensive and highly-attended conferences on workforce diversity. Its members include more than 60 Fortune 100 companies, colleges and universities and non-profit organizations.
